Foreword

The duration of training of newly promoted Additional District & Sessions Judges/Izafi Zilla Qazis is three weeks as per rule 9(4) of the Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Judicial Service rules, 2001 read with Peshawar High Court notification # 5-J dated 20th December 2003. The Academy had already conducted a five day training course in September for them. This further one week training (24-28 November, 2015) was in continuation of the previous training session.

The prime objective behind all these trainings is to improve court management and efficiency and promote transformation of the District Judiciary. What is court management is an important question. The answer is that court management is a mechanism which deals with day to day activities of the court, flow of cases, and utilization of resources i.e. human, financial, intellectual and infrastructural. It also deals with conduct of the presiding officer and the staff and includes maintenance of record. Presiding officer of the court is not only a focal person but is the actual manager who has to manage the court. Court management reduces delay. Most of the Judicial Officers take judicial work as their only responsibility. In this way they ignore the management aspect. Court management may be divided into two cluster areas: first, judicial management, limited to judicial proceedings inside a court and second, auxiliary management. It includes a wide range of activities. Key amongst them are: self management, time management, human and financial resources management, coordination and correspondence with other stakeholders, court decorum, performance evaluation, information sharing, recruitment, gender sensitization, court security, facilities management and crisis management. Self Management and case flow management are important. Punctuality, dress, demeanor, working relationship with staff, colleagues, seniors, lawyers and litigant public; efficient use of time, team leadership and grip on job description are essential components of self management while knowledge of statutes, rules of procedure and practice, case law and modern techniques are essential elements of case flow management. All Judicial officers are required to sensitize themselves with the above traits to achieve the objectives of the organization.

Delay in disposal of cases is a common concern. Hence the tag: Justice delayed is Justice denied. Provision of quick and inexpensive justice is constitutional obligation of the state. The constitution of Islamic Republic of Pakistan recognizes fundamental rights including equality before law and access to justice. Article 37 (d) creates an obligation of the state to ensure inexpensive and expeditious justice. A successful case flow management requires that courts should persistently measure their performance: first, against the expectations reflected by their standards and goals. Second courts should regularly assess the pace of cases at which they flow from institution till disposal. Third they should evaluate their work quantitatively analyzing the case institution-disposal ratio and fourth, they should evaluate their performance qualitatively. The best case flow management practice includes setting the case disposition time standard, early court intervention and continuous court control over case progress.

From the course contents designed for the present training, I could see that the participants have been given coaching on administrative, financial and judicial functions attached to office of ADJ on the basis of their feedback. Ethical principles, which include the Etiquettes and Mannerism, are most important.

The Etiquettes and Mannerism shape the conduct of a person. These either bring him respect or degrade him in the society. One should therefore be conscious about what ought to be the proper course of his actions. He must be mindful of the acts that promote values and, of course, of the acts that result in vices. This observance of the values and avoidance of the vices become more significant in case of persons i.e. Qazi and a judge who decides the fates of the people under the noble trait of 'Dispensation of justice.

ADJs are important pillar of District Judiciary. They are courts of first appellate jurisdiction in most civil and criminal cases. They are courts of original jurisdiction in trial of murder cases and other senior offenses including certain civil proceedings.

Therefore, they need professional competence. The matter of competence covers not only possession of formal legal qualification and knowledge of law, but also an ability to conduct a hearing, to apply the rules of procedure and evidence, to control counsel and witness, to evaluate evidence and arguments, to make a sound decision, and to give adequate reasons therefor. Nowadays, it also covers demeanor, sensitivity towards parties, witnesses and even lawyers, awareness of human rights issues, diligence and efficiency. In this regard, the Academy intends to develop a ready-reckoner called District Judiciary Bench Book for guidance of the probationer, which is at present in the process of vetting and printing and will be provided to them in due course.

The knowledge and experience gained by them during this five day stay at the Academy will prove a valuable asset in their judicial career in future.
