1. Executive Summary

The Law & Justice Commission of Pakistan (LJCP) devised a series of training programs on appraisal of evidence & procedure of trials for Judges and Lawyers. It was funded by Access to Justice Development Fund (AJDF). Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Judicial Academy (KPJA) was the implementing partner, which conducted these training in the Province of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. The target districts were Peshawar, Swat, Chitral, Bannu, D.I Khan and Abbottabad. The key areas were Professional ethics, Proceedings in Civil Cases, Evidence to substantiate case, Adjournments, Sharia Nizam-e-Adl Regulation (Impact study), Summoning of witnesses u/s 540 CrPc, significance of Forensic evidence, Pre trial proceedings and Trial in criminal cases. The trainees were Civil Judges cum judicial Magistrates and lawyers posted in their respective divisions. The ratio between Civil Judges cum Judicial Magistrates and Lawyers was one to three. The District and Sessions Judges in consultation with the Presidents of Bar Association nominated the lawyers for the trainings of their Districts.

The training activity for District Chitral was conducted on 9 & 10th at D.I. Khan, on 11 & 12th at Bannu, on 13 & 14th, at Swat on 16 & 17th, at Abbottabad on 18 & 19th and at Peshawar on 20th and 21st June 2014 respectively. It was attended by a considerable number of participants.

The Resource Persons were mostly Judicial Officers except for Dr. Adnan Khan, Director Research & Publication KPJA. The Resource Persons included Mr. Azim Khan Afridi, DSJ Haripur, Mr. Sharif Ahmad Khan, DSJ, Swat, Mr. Adil Khan, DSJ Charrasadda, Mr. Shaber Khan, DSJ Peshawar, Mr. Rauf Khan, DSJ D.I. Khan, Mr. Shahid Khan DSJ Abbottabad, Mr. Inam Ullah Khan DSJ Tank, Syed Zamrod Shah, DSJ Bannu, DR. Khurshid Iqbal, Dean, Qazi Ataullah, and Ms. javeria Sartaj, Director Instructions KPJA.

The course contents were of practical impart to the participants and the method of instructions was interactive and participatory.

2. Dean's Note

This two-day training was a unique exercise for this Academy. It was conducted on the advice of Law and Justice Commission of Pakistan, which had designed the curriculum, selected the number, categories and ratio of the participants (total 100 with 2/3rd lawyers and 1/3rd judges) and the districts of their residences. Very little was left to this Academy! The Academy is grateful to the LJCP for affording it this opportunity. I can't help appreciate the efforts of the LJCP for showing a concern for training of judges and lawyers and advising this Academy to conduct this training. For a purely academic purpose and with no malice at all, I take this opportunity to highlight some key challenges that the Academy faced in organizing this training. Moreover, a discussion on challenges may prove helpful in any future exercise of similar nature for this Academy as well as the LJCP. Furthermore, we at this Academy believe that we learn from our problems and shortcomings.

Two aspects appeared to be challenging. First, the proposed 100 participants for one course appeared problematic. While the seating space was also a problem, what was found much more difficult was an effective communication of a resource person with such a large number of participants. The standard strength of a class we maintain is 25 participants. This is also with a view to ensure sufficient interaction between the resource person and the participants. In order to ensure effectiveness of communication and sufficient interaction, the participants were divided into two groups. The division helped, though in a limited way, to improve effectiveness of communication, including interaction, particularly during a question-answer session. It was not mere a logistical issue, but one that goes to the core of the concept of training as a branch of adult education. One may appreciate that training is a kind of adult education (Merriam and Ralph; 2007), seeking to bring about changes in knowledge, attitudes, values or skills (Darkenwald and Merriam; 1982). Training of professionals, like judges and lawyers, is a kind of adult education of collegial nature (Oxner; 2003), relating to job description and requires 'a separate body of knowledge, inquiry, research and practice' (Armytage; 1993). Emanating from capacity building, judicial training has far reaching implications in wider perspectives, such as, the rule of law, development and human rights (Armytage; 2003; Iqbal; 2014).

Second, the curriculum though was well designed, but the main points of some topics seem to be wide and diverse. For example, the topic: "Trial in Criminal Cases" was proposed to comprise of framing of charge, the when and how aspects of evidence of prosecution and defence and recording of statement under section 342 Cr.P.C. Each of these sub-topics is so comprehensive that justice could not be done to a single one in a two-hour lecture. Same could be said about other topics, for instance, pretrial proceedings and evidence to substantiate case. On balance, however, topics like importance of expert evidence and disposal of petty nature criminal cases could be covered in given time.

Despite these two challenges, the Academy has made every effort to best to make this training a successful exercise. We have a pre-and post-training evaluation system that works online. A range of questions are asked from the participants on the commencing day. Almost the same questions are again asked from the participants on the concluding. This helps us explore the pre-training level and the needs, including expectations of the participants. In this way, we are able to measure the success of our course. Given the high number of participants, a good number of pre-and post-evaluation forms were to be got filled by participants manually. This manual exercise was difficult to be rigorously monitored. As a result, we could not receive those forms filled each and every participant. Moreover, from lawyers, the exact number of participants did not attend the training. Total number of participants was 346 (252 lawyers and 112 judges). Due to high number of participants, those registered themselves were 222; the record of 124 is not available. The pre-and post-evaluation is 69 %. Hence, 69 % evaluation data could be analyzed. The analyses indicate appreciable improvement in the knowledge and expertise of the participants.

How to Address Adjournments and Stay Matters

By
Sofia Waqar Khattak

Introduction

Law relating to adjournment and Stay matter as embodied in Order XXXIX and XVII CPC is considered purely a discretionary relief. Order XVII as originally enacted consisted of three rules only. Two more rules were added by Ordinance XII of 1972. Rule 1 gives powers to court to adjourn if sufficient cause is shown. Succeeding two rules apply to adjourned dates of hearing in suit. To this extent there is similarity between Order IX and Order XVII. Order IX provides for consequences of all or any party to suit on the day of hearing. Rule 2 states that where on adjourned date of hearing court may proceed to dispose off the suit in any of the modes provided under order IX. Rule 3 confers powers to decide forthwith if party to suit fails to produce evidence inspite of having been given time. Decision may be the same day or on any other day, but it should be on merits. Temporary injunctions is a form of equitable relief and are to be issued in aid of equity and justice. Principle of grant or refusal is regulated by provision of section 53, Specific Relief Act and Order XXXIX rule 1 and 2 of CPC.

Learning Objectives

- An orientation of the basic concept of adjournment and stay matters
- To develop understanding how to address these matters in court of Law
- Significance of adjournment and stay during proceeding
- To sensitize participants about misuse of Law to prolong litigation

Methodology

Main thrust of lecture was to make it more interactive and participatory by involving all the participants. Relevant Provisions of Specific Relief Act also discussed with specific reference to pragmatic approach of matter. Adjournment has become menace as this provision is being misused rather abused for ulterior motives of parties having weak case. It was suggested by the participants that courts need to be more assertive and Bar to strictly adhere to professional ethics and code of conduct. Similarly while dealing with stay matters courts should avoid summary disposal of application. While issuing stay order vague and general terminology should be avoided so as to avoid any interpretation other than intended by the court.

Learning Outcomes

- To develop understanding what actually the intention of lawmakers was while inserting provision relating adjournment
- To sensitize participants about misuse of Law
- Capacity building by gaining command on law and procedure to tackle with apparent frivolous application for adjournment
- Temporary injunction should not become hurdle in expeditious disposal of suit

Suggested Readings

- The code of Civil procedure 1908
- The Specific Relief Act 1877
- Law of Injunctions by Abid Minhas

Pre Trial Proceedings (Criminal)

By

Syed Yahya Zahid Gilani

Introduction:

The lecture encompasses the area of 'Cognizable Criminal Litigation' with the specific focus on the 'Pre-Trial Stage, viz the registration of 'First information Report' (FIR), 'Investigation' and submission of 'Final Report' (Challan) for Trial of the case in Court, covering the procedural law contained in S. 4 (f), Chapter V: S.46, Chapter XIV: S.154 to 173, Chapter XXIV: S.344 and Chapter XXXIX: S.496-497 of Criminal Procedure Code, 1898, pertaining to inception of cognizable criminal case, arrest of the accused, physical entrustment of custody of accused to police for his interrogation, bail matters, whole process of investigation, judicial confinement, time to time adjournments for completion of investigation and submission of final report for commencement of court trial.

The fundamental objectives of the lecture, in this prospective, are:

- Orientation of the Criminal Law relating to 'Pre Trial Proceedings'.
- Correct understanding of the Law on the subject vis-a-vis its aims of effective judicial supervision over the investigation process.
- Detection of causes of the acute problem of delays in investigation.
- Sensitization of the dilemma of unnecessary delays amounting to denial of justice and motivation for gripping the challenge to eliminate the distress within the existing legal frame work.
- Coordination of judicial Magistrates and Advocates in effective implementation of relevant instructions of High Court and NJPMC (National Judicial Policy Making Committee).

This lecture will be a training program for the Judicial Magistrates and Lawyers working at District Judiciary level who directly concern with the 'Pre Trial Proceedings' of the Criminal Cases.

Methodology:

The lecture starts with light motivating inception to comprehend the audience that their vision and leadership qualities, augmented by strong will to work, would lead to explore means and evolve better planning to successfully eradicate core and key issues in shortest time. The lecture is descriptive, analytical and critical in the sense that it studies the relevant law mentioned above, and analyzes it, besides its critical survey to discover the causes of existing hardships and hurdles in its strict implementation. The lecture specifically has direct micro focusing on the problem of non submission of final report for trial of the case within 14 days that the law codified in S. 173 Cr.P.C. zealously require. The lecture educates about the practical strategy devised by the speaker with the name of "PTP-Plan" (Pre Trial Pursuit-Plan) to combat the problem of unnecessary delay in submission of final reports (Challans) when he was working as District and Session judge at Mardan, in the year 2006-2007. The PTP-Plan was successfully utilized and the six months achievements report (from 1st January to 30th June of year 2007) is attached and donated to "Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Judicial Academy” for its library and also to float on its website for utilization of the participants of the course and all others, interested. This tool of the lecture would sensitize the participants that the delays in investigation of criminal cases are curable with attention and hot pursuit, after establishment of articulate data base.

Learning Outcomes:

After attentively attending the lecture, the participant will be expected:

- To have refreshed the apt vision of legal provisions pertaining to Criminal Pre Trial Proceedings.
- To have sensitized about core problem of ‘Delays in Submission of Challan’, (final report for trial) within 14 days, as commanded in law.

Summoning of Witnesses U/S 540 CrPC and Significance of Forensic Evidence

By

Qazi Ataullah

Introduction

At the first instance, the lecture discovers the justification of incorporating Section 540 in the last chapter “Miscellaneous” of the Code of Criminal Procedure. As a second attempt, it introduces Forensic Evidence with special focus on its evidentiary value.

For Section 540 is not a part of regular trial procedure, the lecture deals it in juxtaposition to summoning of witnesses u/ss. 244 and 265(f) of the Code. It explores that the later sections carries the principles of Common Law and as such provide equal opportunity of audience to Prosecution and Defense. Section 540, on the other hand, has been laid down on the principles of Equity that ensures the dispensation of justice on the basis of truth; a keynote for arriving to the just conclusion of the case. Besides, the lecture digs out the philosophy of seven time repetition of word “any” in a small provision of five lines.

Forensic Evidence is the second concern of the activity. The lecture draws a distinction between its literal and technical meanings as it differentiates it from Forensic Science. It also highlights the use of forensic evidence in various disciplines such as Astronomy, Biology, Geology, Archaeology and the alike. The focus, nevertheless, remains on its use in criminal causes. Traditionally, such evidence is taken as non-binding and is used for corroboration only. The lecture explores that the utility of the prevailing practice should be revisited and such evidence may be classified to conclusive and corroborative, on the basis of latest modern research. Should our stance remain unchanged despite the discovery of “Genetic Code” in mid 80’s?

Methodology

Analysis of the relevant provisions will remain the basic technique. Comparison shall also be drawn between them. The participants shall provide their input, especially when tools of interpretation are applied. All these peculiarities will render the lecture analytical on one hand and participative and comparative on the other. As a whole, our approach shall remain jurisprudential, free of journalistic descriptions.

Learning Outcomes

At the end, the participants shall have developed the capability to;

- Realize that equitable justice is the supreme objective.
- Know the situations wherein Section 540 should be invoked.
- Draw distinction between “Right Conclusion of the Case” and “Filling up the gaps” in evidence of either party.
- Understand that summoning of witnesses u/s 540 [part II] is mandatory.
- Comprehend the literal and technical meanings of Forensic Evidence.
- Realize the significance and evidentiary value of Forensic Evidence.
- To classify Forensic Evidence on the basis of latest modern research and to evaluate it accordingly.

PROCEEDINGS IN CIVIL CASES

By

Ms NusratYasmeen

INTRODUCTION

Since proceedings in civil cases are mainly regulated by the code of civil procedure, therefore the lecture discusses the most relevant provisions of Code of civil procedure "CPC". CPC is a very exhaustive code which is primarily a procedural law but also contains substantive provisions; and it may not be possible to encompass all provisions in the same lecture. However an effort has been made to cover all those provisions which relate to various stages of a civil suit it passes through. This lecture also describes the inter-se relation of the various Sections and Orders contained in the Code. This lecture will be very helpful in understanding the very scheme of the Code in its practical application to the litigation before the court.

In this context the key objectives of the lecture are:

- Basic understanding of relevant provisions of CPC.
- Comprehension of inter-se relation of various Sections and Orders.
- Practical application of provisions of CPC to litigations.
- Understanding of the powers of court in dealing with civil cases.
- Knowledge of provisions that can be pressed into service to overcome technicalities.

Methodology:

The lecture is descriptive as well as analytical. Descriptive in the sense, that it studies and describes various provisions of CPC and analytical as it analysis the co-existence of the Sections and Orders, and its applicability to cases before court.

EVALUATIONS

5. Evaluation

6.1 Pre Evaluation & Post Evaluation (Closed Ended Questions)

Analysis:

The graph G1 represents the combined pre and post evaluation result of 06 trainings. The closed ended questions in the pre evaluation and post evaluation were marked and compared. A scale of 1-10 has been standardized for the results. The overall score for the pre evaluation was 6.6 and the post evaluation result was 9.2, which shows significant improvement in the knowledge based skills of participants after the training. The G1 is based from the result of different MCQs. Each MCQ has a minimum 03 field (options) for the participants of the training to choose from. These close ended questions were in MCQs form and 02 MCQs were taken from each topic taught during the course.

6.2 Over all training Evaluation

According to graph 1, 98% of the trainees opined that course content was quite relevant to their judicial work. Only 2% opined that the training will bring a little improvement in their work. This number is negligible. Graph 2 reveals that 100% of the trainees are of the opinion that the training material was highly useful. About the skills of the trainer, 79% saw it “very good” and 27% saw it excellent. It shows that there is, though little, room for improvement. As far as command of the trainers over the subject is concerned, 70% opined that it was excellent. The remaining graphs shows that the training environment in the academy was excellent, however their opinions in respect of accommodation and food quality therein are worthy consideration Note: For the reason that some questions are similar [see consolidated resource person feedback graph] and the results in graphs are more or less the same, we have therefore left them uncommented.

6.3 Comparative Statistical Statement of Pre & Post Training Evaluation

The scales show the capacity level of the participants before and after training. Figure 1 (orange) indicates pre – training intellectual level of the trainees at their arrival in the academy.

6.4 Consolidated Resource Person Evaluation by Trainees

The above graphical map is self explanatory. Each group of graph reflects the level of a specific quality in all resource persons. For example the last group reflects that 98% participants see full perfectness [100%] in motivation and professionalism exhibited by the pool of trainers during training.

Welcome Speech of the Director General

It is a great occasion for Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Judicial Academy that we are entering into a new era. We are involving the lawyers in the training process. We have many plans and programmes for the training of lawyers.

Judicial system in Pakistan hinges on two horns of a bull; one is the judges i.e. the district judiciary as well as the High court and the second is the lawyers, commonly called advocates. A single bar intervenes between the two; on one side there is judge and on the other side of the bar there is advocate. Both of them have got similar responsibilities. Both are answerable to Almighty Allah in the same way. One is to decide and the other is to assist.

Assistance is sometimes more important than the decision, because decision is made on the basis of assistance which is given. It is a sort of ladder that when you climb a building, you use a ladder and if the ladder is strong you reach the roof safely and quickly and if the ladder is weak there is always a chance that you may fall down and you may not reach the roof. So to me the person standing on the other side of the bar is more important and more responsible.

Ladies Gentlemen! You have selected a very tough job. You have selected a job which imparts more responsibility, which imposes a larger duty of the nation upon you, because you represent the justice seeker. It is a wrong conception that the plaintiff or the complainant is the justice seeker and the defendant or accused is not the justice seeker. Both the parties have come to the court for justice. And their mouths and their faces are lawyers. This being the position, he is a very important segment of the society. When we were lawyers we used to hear in the bar and we use to say that we are the cream of the society. And I still believe that bar is the cream of the society. You are face of the nation. If you are disciplined, the nation is disciplined. If you fight for justice, the nation gets justice.

Ladies and Gentlemen! This is your Academy. You are an important segment of the justice system and it is our duty to transfer what we have to improve your capacities. I hope you will enjoy the day here and your attitudes and behavior will be changed from tomorrow.

Wish you best of luck.

Class Representative Remarks (Consolidated)

On behalf of all my colleagues may I take the pride to pay our gratitude to Hon'able Chief Justice for affording us the opportunity to take part in this one week's training program. The Academy is a marvelous achievement and an institution of its own kind. It is a dream come true and no doubt KPK Judiciary took long strides in this direction. It was not possible without the able leadership and patronage of the Hon Chief Justice. The way this Academy is being managed and the efforts being put are excellent by all means. We can foresee that all these efforts would transform this small Academy to a gigantic centre of excellence of judicial and legal studies and the milestone is not that far.

Now coming to our training part, within this short span of time we really enjoyed the legal and academic environment, presentation sessions, views of the resource persons and what is more the heated debates over a number of issues of jurisprudential concepts and legal practices. Though this short period of training could not satiate the intellectual thirst, it was sufficient to make us learn, discuss and debate, share our respective angles of seeing a thing, share our experiences and what is more we learnt to listen to the mind of each other. It appears that when we came here we had only our own views and experiences, but while leaving now we are carrying with us experiences of each other.

On academic part the resource persons, staff of the Academy as well the visiting faculty, generated sufficient interest to involve us in discussions. We started with important topics of framing of charge, public nuisance, oath by the parties and its evidentiary significance, execution of decrees and bail. The lecture on anomalies and conflict between different laws by Mr. Niaz Khan was most interesting and thought provoking. Specifically after that particular presentation we felt how deficient we are and we really lack juristic approach for interpretation of statutes.

We have also been asked to submit detail report as to the quality of training and point out areas where further improvement can be made. The report shall be prepared and submitted. This feedback shall help further making the training programs more meaningful and effective. In that respect few of our suggestions are:

1. Reading material may be provided beforehand.

2. At the start of training, a session may be conducted to apprise the participants how to participate, discuss things in an impersonal way and listen to other's point of view with patience.
3. Each participant must be given at least one topic well before the training to prepare and present it during the session.
4. More hunting may be made for truly academic and research loving resource persons.

With these humble submissions I again thank you all specially the DG, the academic and administrative wings for your valuable support and benevolent treatment.

Thanks
